

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Little Robby, General Johnson's Secretary, Mystery of Washington

WASHINGTON — Nobody quite knows where Little Robby came from. General Johnson himself, says he doesn't know.

"When I came to Washington I found her in my office," he says, "and she has been with me, two paces to the rear, ever since."

Some say she was born in Evansville, Ill., a little town of about 500, where the Mississippi makes a big bend just below St. Louis—but nobody is quite sure. She was brought up in a convent and educated in a university, whose name, she says, she doesn't want to reveal for fear of bringing it notoriety.

Other stenographers and her women friends in the NRA know little about her. The Personnel Officer has no file regarding her past experience. It is known that she worked in the New York office of the Radio Corporation of America, then joined Democratic National Headquarters. Finally Bob Strauss, son of Macy's Ambassador to France, brought her to Washington, installed her in General Johnson's office when they were still writing the NRA act.

Mystery Woman

She remains the mystery woman of the Capital. But no matter where she came from, there are few women who have worked harder for Roosevelt Recovery, wielded more power within the NRA, and have flashed more spectacularly across the headlines than Miss Frances Robinson.

She has sat in conferences with the barons of big business. She has been a frequent visitor at the White House. She is called "Robby" by the President of the United States. She has travelled 40,000 miles in Army planes. And she draws $6,000 annually for being secretary and shadow to the man who for more than a year has attempted to rule American industry.

There are many women secretaries in Washington who play a powerful role. But most of them work behind the scenes. They are quiet, efficient, loyal. They contribute materially to the success of the official whom they serve—but to the general public they are unknown.

Limelight

Little Robby has all of these qualities save one. She chose not to remain unknown.

Unquestionably, this was the harder role, for it has opened her to attack. No woman, no matter who she is, can play so important a part in the machinery of Recovery—and play it publicly—without arousing the interest of a nation. And this part Little Robby has accepted as hers.

She has, beyond any doubt, the nerve of a brass monkey. She is equally at home in straightening the tie of a newspaperman, bawling out office boys, attending a stag party uninvited, or talking to the President of the United States.

One day Roosevelt telephoned to Johnson from Hyde Park. The General was out of the office, was not expected back for some time. Through some error, the President remained on the phone, waiting. Little Robby picked up the receiver.

"Hello, Mr. President," she said, in her shrill voice. "How are you?"

"It's awful hot down here," she continued.

"Yes, we're working terribly hard." . . . And she kept this up for some time.

Few Friends

Probably it is natural that Robby should not be popular with other women in the Administration. NRA secretaries play up to her because she is powerful in personnel matters. But she has few close friends. Miss Perkins resents her constant presence during conferences with Johnson while Mrs. Roosevelt is slightly aloof—though Robby is invited to all of the White House "ben" parties.

LONG'S FORCE MARCHING ON NEW ORLEANS

Entire Militia of Louisiana to Control Walmsley's Town

NEAR MARTIAL LAW

1,300 Armed Police May Stop Advance

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 7.—The mailed fist of the United States Senator Huey P. Long, Louisiana's dictator by act of a legislature bent to his will, crashed down on the city of New Orleans today.

An army of 2,200 men, the state's entire militia force, mobilized throughout the night in seventeen cities and towns in Louisiana under secret orders from Adj. Gen. Raymond Fleming and began a hurried march on this city.

During the night and into the day trucks, filled with khaki-clad steel-helmeted troops, rumbled over roads leading toward New Orleans. Troop trains clattered along a dozen railroad routes.

Shortly after dawn today, while the city's population slept unaware, the military invasion of New Orleans began.

TROOPS WELL-ARMED

The troops, equipped for full wartime operations, included infantry, cavalry and howitzer units and a medical detachment.

The object of the state-wide troop movement was shrouded in official secrecy. Gov. Oscar K. "Okay Huey" Allen, fresh from a star chamber "citizens" meeting attended only by some 50 persons whom he summoned to confer on alleged vice conditions in New Orleans, refused to discuss the matter. Gen. Fleming was tight-lipped. (Continued on Page Two)

Airport Saves Plane's Riders

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 7.—Chance sighting of an airport marker today saved the lives of five persons in a Chicago-bound plane, lost for six hours in fog and rainstorm and forced many miles off its course after leaving Newark, N. J., airport at 12:45 a. m.

The plane landed safely at Lowell airport.

W. S. Shannon of New York, pilot of the plane, an American air line craft, said that shortly after taking off, the plane ran into a driving rainstorm and the ship's radio went out.

LABATT ABDUCTORS THREATEN DEATH

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 7.—In open defiance of the mobilized strength of Canadian law enforcement services, John Labatt's abductors have struck again.

Over the signature of "Three Fingered Abe," who signed the original ransom demand, they have sent a second and third letter to Labatt at London. They charge that he has broken his "solemn promise" made over a meal to pay $25,000 after his release, demand fulfillment of the pledge, and in their third message threaten that if he fails he will "get a belly full of lead."

GOOSE DOWNS PLANE

MINEOLA, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Forced down by a collision with a goose was the story told today by the crew of the Nassau-co police plane.

Enroute to Providence, R. I., to bring back a witness, the plane returned in three hours without the witness.

The pilot said the plane had struck a goose in flight, and had killed the bird. The plane was jolted but undamaged.

Drive against careless autoists and other violators of highway laws continued here today, with at least one heavy fine dished out by Mayor W. B. Cady Friday morning.

OHIO LEGION ASKS BONUS

It Would Put $482,929 in Pockets of Pickaway-Co Veterans.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 7.—Ohio's army of war veterans, banded together under the American Legion, today prepared plans to carry the fight for immediate cash payment of the bonus to the floor of the national convention of the organization in Miami next month with the battle cry—Aid prosperity by giving soldiers their $2,200,000 bonus.

Immediate payment of the bonus, according to the officers of the Ohio American Legion here, would release $117,878,406 purchasing power in Ohio. The state department of the legion unanimously went on record as favoring immediate cash payment at its convention in Sandusky. "It therefore committed itself," said a legion official here, "to carry the fight to the national convention."

According to figures at the legion's headquarters here, immediate cash payment of the bonus would give ex-soldiers in Pickaway-co $482,929.

YOUTHS DENY MURDER OF BUFFALO OFFICER

Plead Not Guilty When Arraigned Before Justice Norton Today

ATTORNEYS NAMED

Death to be Asked By District Attorney

BUFFALO, Sept. 7.—Bruno Salek and Stanley Pluzdrak, captured in Circleville, O., early Sunday after a breakneck automobile ride to escape law officers in this city, pleaded not guilty today when they were arraigned in state supreme court on jury indictments charging them with killing Police Lieutenant George Uhl on Aug. 31.

Both asked that counsel be appointed to defend them. The date for the trials was delayed pending a conference between Justice James E. Norton and W. Bartlett Sumner and Valentine C. O'Grady, appointed by the count as their attorneys.

Salek, named as the confession made detectives in Circleville, appeared today. His head was injured resulting from a pile wreck in the town's outskirts. He self possessed.

They are held first degree murder, preventing their freedom.

Alice Zimmerman, German girl, who was with the pair when caught, is charged with illegal possession of firearms.

The district attorney has declared he will demand the death penalty for the youths who allegedly shot Uhl in cold blood then kidnapped Theodore B. Keating, wealthy business man.

CLUES MEAGER

The death car bore yellow license plates, police learned from Everett Swanson, 22, the only witness to the murder. Swanson could give only a hazy description of the two killers.

Guilford's stormy journalistic career nearly came to an end in 1927 when he was shot in the abdomen by gunmen. Although wounded seriously he recovered.

While he was editor of The Saturday Press that publication was suppressed by the Hennepin-co grand jury under the Minnesota newspaper "gag" law. The fight was carried to the United States supreme court where the law finally was held unconstitutional.

Gambling and other forms of vice were frequently the targets of Guilford's editorial attacks and he complained that his life had been threatened.

NEW ENGLAND 'WAR' FEARED

Pickets Marching Toward Plants Preparing To Close All of Them.

By International News Service.

Lines in the nation's industrial civil war which thus far has taken 10 lives and sent scores to hospitals, tightened today as textile strike leaders declare they would not submit issues of the strike to arbitration until every mill in the country is closed.

Interpreted variously as the calm before the storm and the death knell of the strike, quiet settled over the south, while fear of violence shifted to New England where a huge picket army was reported moving forward in its drive to close all mills.

The main bodies of flying squadrons of pickets were reported moving in the Fall River and New Bedford areas of Massachusetts in long lines of motor cars. Others were seen near Lowell, Mass., and Manchester, N. H.

Both sides were prepared for violence. Some towns were described as armed camps. One hundred imported guards from New York manned parapets thrown up in streets leading to mills in Dighton, Mass.

While Salem authorities, saying loyal workers had been threatened with bombing in their homes, authorized police to "meet" violence with violence. Horace A. Riviere, United Textile Workers' (Continued on Page Two)

EDITOR SLAIN, CLUES SOUGHT

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 7.—Only a meager description of the two assassins guided police today in their hunt for the killers of Howard Guilford, 40, crusading editor and foe of the underworld who was slain last night by shotgun blast.

Guilford, former editor of the militant weekly publications, The Saturday Press and The Pink Sheet, was driving home when an automobile bearing the two killers crowded his car to the curb in the exclusive Pillsbury avenue district.

One of the gangsters fired a shotgun blast which nearly decapitated Guilford. The editor's automobile rolled up on the sidewalk with its dead driver. The killers paused a moment to make sure Guilford was dead and then raced away.

Tigers May Play Academy Outfit

Where a week ago Circleville high school was without an opponent to open its season on Sept. 21, Principal E. I. Gephart, who doubles as faculty manager, now has two to pick from. He can play either Columbus Academy or Holy Family, also of Columbus.

It is believed Bill Hunt's Academy outfit will be the final selection although Holy Family is not yet out of the running. No matter which team is selected the game will be played here.

Officials already contracted are Jim Wirt, Ohio conference official and an instructor at Ohio State university, and Carleton Smith, Bexley, his mentor. Other officials expected to work here this year are Rodney Ross, Vic Kolb and

Ed. Boyd, the latter of Lancaster. Ross is the Columbus South coach while Kolb is an Ohio Wesleyan alumnus.

SQUAD LIGHT ONE

Coach Herberholz will have to teach his youths speed and deception this year since there is only one man on the squad, it is believed, who weighs over 150 pounds; that is big George Roth, out for his first year, and expected to give someone a race for a berth. Roth is big, not slow, and if the proper fighting spirit can be shot into him he will surely prove an asset. If Roth comes through as expected one tackle position will be well taken care of.

The other boys, there are about 24 more, are showing a fine spirit in Coach Herberholz' twice-a-day-practice plan and seem determined to do something this year.

Columbus Academy has gained considerable attention in Columbus athletic circles under Bill Hunt, erstwhile Ohio State cage star. Heretofore the Academy has been a little bit questionable concerning eligibility rules but Hunt has promised Gephart that all boys on his squad this year would be eligible for any high school team. Holy Family, too, has a good squad but from a drawing card angle the Academy would be the best for the local school.

A week later Lancaster is met there in a night game.

BIRDS PLAY TWO

COLUMBUS, Sept. 7.—With both the Columbus Red Birds and the Indianapolis Indians rained out of their respective games yesterday, the standings in the race for the eastern division championship of the American Association remained unchanged today.

Today both teams were preparing for "freak" double headers, one game in the afternoon and one at night. Manager Ray Blades of the Birds has named Ed Heusser and Ed Greer as the starting pitchers in the games against the Louisville Colonels in the Louisville field.

The Toledo Mud Hens will take on the Indianapolis team at the Braves stadium in the other double-header bill.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

FIVE YEARS AGO THERE were four high school football teams in Pickaway-co, Circleville, Ashville, Williamsport and Walnut-twp.—Now there is but one, Circleville. Williamsport was the first to quit, then came Walnut-twp.—Ashville was third quitting after last season to devote its time and money to speed ball—This is the initial year for speed ball in the up-county town but already reports are that it's a success.

That Ashville-Circle football rivalry is definitely at an end but Ashville's basketball team beat ours last year, and that's something—Another thing: This is for Al Kauber, Ashville coach; "You can send Jim Scoles and Chuck Young down here. We'd find places for them on our football team, and basketball, too, for that matter."

Frank Lynch did it again Thursday evening—His Coca Cola won from the rejuvenated Ohio Utilities team either 5 to 3 or 5 to 4, no one seemed sure—

Barney Ross and Jim McLarnin will try again tonight if the weatherman is more favorable than he was last night when the welterweight title bout was postponed 24 hours.

GEHRIG GAINS MONOPOLY ON RACE HONORS

Leads American Loop in Many Departments; Others Still Have Chance.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—With the Giants and Tigers slowly but surely getting together like a little colored boy and a piece of watermelon, what little interest remains in the Major league races is centered in the battle for individual records and personal leadership.

Lou Gehrig of the Yankees is ambitious to top the American league in everything and he's a sure bet to attain most of his marks.

HOLDS MANY MARKS

When the season is over he will have played in more than 1,500 games for an all-time endurance record. At the moment he tops Charley Gehring of the Tigers and Heinie Manush in a hot race for batting honors. His 42 homers put him two up on Jimmy Fox of the Athletics. He has made the most hits in his own league and leads both circuits in runs batted in. He is third to Gehring of the Tigers and Werber of the Red Sox in runs scored. He also has hit for most extra bases.

Aside from this, Lou has been of hardly any offensive value to the Yanks. In the older circuit, Bill Terry is trying to overhaul Paul Waner of the Pirates for batting honors while Max Out of the Giants, Jimmy Collins of the Cards and Wally Berger of the Braves are having a hot tussle for home run honors with the first two having socked 32 and Berger 31.

Ott also has his eye fixed on the leadership for runs batted in and runs scored, in both of which departments he is now leading. Ott did nothing to help his team yesterday but, as usual, the Giants had somebody else to supply the punch needed to take the Cubs 2-1 in 12 heats. The victory put the Giants nine games upon the Cubs and virtually killed what slender chance the Chicagoans might have had of catching the New York entry.

TERRY'S HIT WINS

The game developed into a corking duel between Lee and Parnelle. Galan's homer in the first was the only run made off Parnelle and the first of five hits the Giant's speed king yielded. Successful hits by Moore, Critz and Manager Bill Terry himself after two were out in the ninth put the crusher on Lee and the Cubs.

PROCLAMATION OF SAFETY CAMPAIGN

The high autoicide toll of approximately two thousand persons annually in Ohio brings out vividly the pressing necessity of keeping the public's mind alive to the importance of safety.

Despite all efforts to eliminate hazards, to provide traffic control measures and to enforce regulations, there must also be fostered in the citizenry, young and old alike, an attitude of carefulness and attention to their own protection against the chances of an accident.

Therefore, deeply concerned over the staggering toll of deaths, injuries and property damage caused by highway accidents, I do hereby proclaim the month of September as "Street and Highway Safety Month" and urge the citizens of Ohio, officials in every community, all civic organizations and similar bodies to cooperate to the fullest in the nation-wide safety movement this month by practicing or sponsoring the safety requirements dictated by ordinary intelligence and prudence.

Traffic mishaps being the greatest cause of loss of life in accidents, I do particularly urge motorists to scrupulously refrain from any careless acts and by safe and careful driving to promote the precepts of safety at all times by their own example and habits.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the great seal of the State of Ohio to be affixed hereto at Columbus, this 25th day of August in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-four.

NOW PLAYROOMS

The rooms formerly occupied by the two old furnaces will be converted into playrooms, one for the boys and one for the girls. They will be used during inclement weather.

Improvements at Walnut-st were started as a CWA project but were finally finished with funds furnished by the board of education. Barnes and Marion was the contracting firm.

The man who deserves most of the credit for seeing that the job was done right is R. G. Colville, clerk of the board of education. With the exception of the several weeks he spent in his primary campaign, Colville worked day and night at the building and is still on the job to see that the last bit of work is properly completed.

Someone fittingly recommended that the name of the building be changed to "Colville Building." It would be a real sign of appreciation for Mr. Colville's efforts.

There is a fourth type of earth motion, say scientists. We already had thought the old world was getting more wobbly.

LONG'S FORCE

Commanding officers of the units said no explanation was given in the mobilization orders.

Senator Long, in a tirade against the city administration of Mayor T. Semmes Walmesley, voiced over the radio from the militia-guarded Star chamber hearing of the legislative committee conducting an investigation of alleged municipal corruption, yesterday, however, was believed to have given the cue.

BLAMES POLICE

Long, prosecutor-in-chief of the inquiry, charged the committee's witnesses had been intimidated by New Orleans police under the direction of Mayor Walmesley.

"There seems to be a conspiracy afoot to force the governor to put the police of this town under the militia," the Senator shouted.

"The governor promised this committee and its witnesses absolute, complete protection. He gave us almost unlimited power.

"If it becomes necessary to stop this intimidation of witnesses and threats against their lives I can strip this city of all its civil power. I can have the governor call the legislature into session and put every rotten, crooked lowdown official in this city out of office."

No proclamation of martial law had been announced by Gov. Allen early today. This was not deemed necessary, however, as the city was placed under "partial martial law" when troops on July 30 seized the city registration office, where the rolls of eligible voters of Orleans parish are kept.

Mayor T. Semmes Walmesley told International News Service: "We won't surrender the city to the militia without a struggle. We intend taking whatever steps may be necessary at the proper time."

Walmesley backed up by a loyal force of 1,300 well-armed policemen.

The city recently purchased a supply of submachine guns and automatic rifles.

Five hundred of Walmesley's policemen were sworn in when the militia seized the registration office five weeks ago.

G. O. P. PLANS

reach an accord on planks affecting state government and continued in session until 4 a. m. today.

At that hour the platform committee appointed a sub-committee to whip the result of its night's labor into final shape, shear off unnecessary excrescences and obtain approval of the finished program from Clarence J. Brown, G. O. P. gubernatorial nominee.

CALLED FROM BED

The sub-committee, composed of P. L. Mitchell, Cincinnati; Walter Ruff, Canton; D. C. Brower, Dayton; Karl Timmermeister, Wapakoneta; Chester C. Bolton, Cleveland, and the state chairman, Ed Schorr, routed the Nominee Brown out of bed before dawn to discuss the platform in order that it might be submitted to the closing session of the state convention.

Featuring the long night of platform deliberations was the attempt of Ruff, state senator from Canton, to write in a plank committing the party to collective bargaining in its labor policy.

Several members maintained that such recognition of collective bargaining would be nothing short of "falling in with the New Deal." Senator Ruff denied this and challenged the party to say to labor "you are either for or against" unionizing.

Final decision on the wording of the proposed labor plank was to be deferred to the wishes of the gubernatorial nominee. There was a possibility that the entire labor plank might be eliminated before the platform is submitted to the convention for adoption, some committee members said.

No specific tax program was contained either in the tentative platform or in the keynote address of Brown. Adequate tax measures were favored but there was no mention of either a sales tax or an income tax.

The school plank in the platform as tentatively accepted by the resolutions committee went no farther than to put the party on record as guaranteeing an elementary and high school education to every child.

ELIMINATE DELAYS

When completed the party platform also will contain planks committing the Republicans to enactment of legislation necessary to eliminate long delays in utilities rate cases and one written by the Ohio sportsmen's league advocating control of the state conservation department by a bi-partisan commission.

State Sen. John A. Lloyd, Portsmouth, was elected chairman of the resolutions committee which framed the platform. Other committee members were:

P. L. Mitchell, Cincinnati; Henry F. Cordes, Cincinnati; D. C. Brower, Dayton; Karl Timmermeister, Wapakoneta; D. F. Fruehling, Paulding; Arthur Hamilton, Lebanon; Henry Pfeiffer, Kenton; Nolan Boggs, Toledo; Homer Edwards, Ironton; Milton J. Scott, Chillicothe; Paul Gieger, Columbus; L. E. Eger, Sandusky; James A. Jones, Ravenna; E. O. Beall, Woodfield; Walter Ruff, Canton; Harvey Hammond, Danville; Arch Fogle, St. Clairsville; Charles Anderson, Warren; R. H. Davis, Cleveland; Harry L. Davis, Cleveland; and Chester C. Bolton, Cleveland.

vice-president, was declaring at Fall River, Mass.:

"If we are shot at we will shoot back. If we stick together three days we will close every mill in the country."

It was estimated more than 355,000 were on strike in the nation. To this number Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the general strike committee, threatened to add 165,000 from industries allied with textiles.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Faced with a mounting toll of violence and casualties in the gigantic textile strike—already at 10 killed and scores wounded—a presidential board of mediators met here today to try to make peace.

The outlook was not immediately bright. Obviously angered by the killings in the south, the strike leaders, directed by Francis J. Gorman, announced they would not be willing to talk mediation until every mill in the far-flung industry is shut down. They are still some distance from that goal.

The mill-owners, on the other hand, seemed equally cool to federal mediatory efforts. Prior to the actual walk-out, the employers consistently declined to meet the union leaders at the counsel table of the national labor relations board, and since the strike became effective they have indicated no change in this attitude.

Origin of Term "Toasting"

The Anglo-Saxon custom of drinking healths has been, since the Eighteenth century, termed "toasting." In the Tattler the word is connected with the toast put into ale cups. This is probably correct, says the author of an old English work on ale and beer, though Wedgewood considers "toast" a corruption of "stos an," knock (glasses), a German drinker's cry.

CLIPPINGER TRACES HISTORY OF REVIVAL

Dating the history of American revivals back to 1734 with the preaching of a series of sermons by Jonathan Edwards at Northampton, Conn., on "Justification by Faith," Bishop A. R. Clippinger, Dayton, of the United Brethren church, delivered his annual oration to the southeastern Ohio district of his church here Thursday. Dr. Clippinger's subject was "The Evangelistic Zeal of the Fathers."

"We would consider that a pretty dry subject for revival sermons today," the speaker said. "Not many pastors would even attempt a series of sermons on that subject, but the whole community was stirred. It spread throughout all Connecticut, and into New Jersey."

He then referred to the Great Awakening in the spring of 1740 when Whitfield returned to America and joined Edwards.

CITES DWIGHT'S EFFORT

"Following the Revolutionary war there was a period of demoralization both spiritually and financially," the Bishop continued. "It was still a question if the new government could subvert and if Christianity could ever be on the ascendancy. Infidelity and agnosticism were common on every hand and especially in the colleges. When Dr. Timothy Dwight became president of Yale university he found a deplorable situation. Less than half dozen students were members of the college church. His chapel talks were deeply religious and in 1802 a revival broke out when 75 students out of 230 were converted. Dartmouth and Princeton shared similar experiences. In western Pennsylvania a revival broke out and more than 1,000 souls professed conversion."

"The revivals took on a special form," he went on. "They were often held in the woods. Great camp meetings were assembled; great excitement was seen. People would fall into trances, and lie apparently lifeless for hours. Some would get what was called the jerks."

Dr. Clippinger next called attention to Charles G. Finney whom he ranked among the greatest of earlier evangelists. He also listed the familiar name of the late Dwight L. Moody whose doctrine and preaching he compared to Jonathan Edwards.

RECALLS RECENT NAMES

Among more recent evangelists Dr. Clippinger listed B. Fay Mills, Sam Jones, Sam Small, William A. Sunday, Dr. R. A. Torrey and Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman.

In turning to the fathers of the United Brethren denomination, Dr. Clippinger said: "The spirit of evangelism has been so thoroughly imbedded into the hearts and minds of our pastors and preachers that most of them have been successful evangelists."

"For United Brethren folks there is no volume more interesting than Bishop Newcomer's Diary. This antiquated volume is filled with stories of conversions. Wherever these Church Fathers went they preached repentance. Wherever they went they called upon people to give their hearts to God. They met with bitter opposition but at the same time many hearts were receptive to the gospel preaching. Like in the days of Samuel—the word of God was scarce. They were men of Holy zeal, whose hearts were aflame with the truth and their hearts warm for the salvation of their neighbors."

Dr. Clippinger went on to say: "The United Brethren church is an outgrowth and result of an evangelistic zeal and passion on the part of its founders."

He closed by reciting from Psalms 126:6 saying: "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing bringing his sheaves with him."

REV. COX SPEAKS

The annual report of Rev. A. B. Cox, Newark, superintendent of the southeastern Ohio district, made the following recommendations: 1. That the superintendent attend the district superintendents soon after conference to outline the policy for the year; 2. That a revival be held in each church and a gospel team or workers be organized to help

Omen

MONTANA, where winter is winter, comes forth with the first weather sign for the approaching unpleasantness; a sign in which goosebump prophets read a prophecy which should make glad the hearts of winter resort magnates.
Deer returning earlier than usual to the plains and foothills from their summer feeding grounds in the mountains tell the mountain men that the winter will be early and hard. As to its length, some other weather sign must be found and interpreted.
This supposedly prophetic conduct of the Montana deer cannot be attributed to a scarcity of forage in the highlands, since it is known that the grazing is better in the uplands than in the lowlands. And knowing of nothing else to which to attribute it, the weather prophets deduce that a hard winter is headed hell-bent in their direction.
Perhaps the instinct of the deer has warned it, and then again an early breath of cold air out of the north may have deceived the animal instinct. It would not be the first time that migrating animals have departed too soon or remained behind too long.

Still, you are making progress if you can realize how dumb you were yesterday.

Beards

RUMORS from Paris that beards for young bloods are coming back are certain to point the finger of suspicion at the barber guild. If the razor is discarded, it will be due to a conspiracy among the barbers inspired by the possibility of more profit from beard trimming and cultivating than from beard eradication.
Young Americans made serious minded by the present struggle for existence might consider the fashion for its possibilities in giving the appearance of wisdom if not the actual wisdom of Solomon. There is something imposing and impressive in a natty Van Dyke.
But should whiskers come back what shape and form will they take? Will the new school of beard boosters affect the full set of whiskers? Or the spade type? Or the parted-in-the-middle variety? Or the goatee? And how about the branzigan? Then there is the muttonchop beard and the more flowing dundreary.
Whiskers remain the one masculine prerogative the modern miss cannot usurp, but the power is hers to prevent the exercising of it by the boy friend. If beards are anathema to her there will be no beards.

Soaking the nose in alcohol is said by a scientist to be an effective treatment for hay fever. Would suds do as well?

"MA CINDERELLA" by Harold Bell Wright

CHAPTER XXVIII.
Ann and Nance were at a window, looking down on the busy street below and away over the wilderness of buildings.
"Hit's plum' awful, ain't hit?" muttered Nance. "Not a tree nor a bush ner a hill ner nothin'—jest folks an' automobiles an' cars an' buildings, fer as a body can look. How in Gawd-a-mighty's world do you reckon they all make out to live? Hit sure beats me."
"Shucks!" returned Ann. "Hit's all in the way a body looks at hit. Me, I'm a-honin' to git right down thar amongst 'em an' rustle 'round with the best. Hit's Gawd's truth, Nance, I'm a-feelin' thirty year younger a'ready. I reckon if hit wasn't fer Herb I'd be plum' foolish—stoppin' high, like's not, a-gettin' into all sorts of trouble—nice interestin' trouble, I mean. Whoo-ee! All this hiear's sure a long way from the Pine Knob neighborhood—hit sure is!"
"Hit's all right fer sich as you an' Herb, mebbe, returned Nance, dolefully. "But I've seen enough right now to know I can't never stand hit. I'll jest curl up an' die sure."
"You'll be all right soon's I git us a real place to live," returned Ann.
Nance looked at her with fresh alarm. "What be you a-meanin' by that?"
"I mean as how I aim to git we-us a sure-nough house, with bedrooms down close to the ground, an' our own automobiles, an' our own help what don't have to be tipped every time a body turns 'round, an' whar we-us can say who's to come in an' who ain't. I can see right now these hiear hotels ain't made to live in; they're jest places to stop at til a body can git somewhere else."
"Huh!" retorted Nance. "Mebbe you'll say whar you 'low to find sich a thing's a sure-nough house in sich a Gawd-awful place as this?"
"You don't need to fret yourself none. I'll find hit soon's me an' Herb gits a chance to look 'round a bit. Mebbe Herb won't like this city 'nough to settle down hiear. Mebbe we-us'll jest up an' move on. You can't tell, we-us might go far as New York. Hit all depends. First thing you an' me's got to git us some clothes. I aim fer us to look like John Herbert's wimmenfolks ought to look."
Nance looked around uneasily. "Be you plum' sure, I know good an' well, I never seen nothin' like the way you're a-spendin' fer. You done paid six dollars jest fer whar we-us et at one meal on the train. I seed you. These hiear rooms must be costin' you a sight. I'll bet they ain't a mite less'n two dollars apiece."
Ann laughed. "Shucks! I reckon as how I could buy this whole bang right out if I wai a-wantin' to bother with hit." She continued with a show of impatience: "You jest can't seem to git hit into your dumb head, Nance, that whar old John Haskel done left was a real fortune. Hit ain't no measly little smell of money, hit's high on two million. An' that's more'n some kinks has got."
"Mebbe I can't sense how much two millions of money is," Nance retorted, grinning. "But I know good an' well when hit's found out what you done to git hit, an' made me do."
She halted and shrank back from the danger lights which flashed in her mountain companion's eyes. "I ain't meanin' no harm, Ann—jest to Gawd I ain't meanin' to tell nothin'."
The telephone rang.
The two backwoods women stared at the instrument.
"My Gawd-a-mighty!" wailed Nance. "Thar hit comes right now. Thar thar's a warnin' fer we-us to git ready fer the police."
"Shet up!" snapped Ann. "No matter whar 'tis—if you open your fool mouth I'll peel your scalp if hit's the last move I make."
"I reckon we-us best git Herb," Ann added as the bell repeated the call. "He'll know how to work the thing."
But even as she spoke, the door to her son's room opened and the young man entered. While the two backwoods women watched with breathless interest he went to the instrument.
"Hello!... This is Mrs. Haskel's son speakin'... What is your business with my mother, Mr. Belden?"
With quick decision Ann crossed the room and placed her hand on her son's arm. "Wait a minute, Herb! If anybody 'lows we got business with me, I'll do the talkin'!"
Smiling, the young man silently passed the receiver to his mother. "Hah!" cried Ann, with childish delight and wonder. "Sounds like he war right hiear in this room, a-gettin' into all sorts of trouble—nice interestin' trouble, I mean. Whoo-ee! All this hiear's sure a long way from the Pine Knob neighborhood—hit sure is!"
"Answer him, mother," whispered John Herbert. "Say something or he'll hang up."
"Yes—sure, this is me," she shouted into the instrument. "Not so loud—not so loud!"
"Sure," said Ann, "this hiear's Ann Haskel. You can't see me, but I'm sure right hiear a-talkin' to you... Belden, heh?... Never heard tell of you that I recollect... Whar be you?... Right down here? Sure 'nough?... Wal, I'll be snatched. Wal, why don't you come along up hiear whar I be if you're a-wantin' to see me bad 'nough to come fur's you have?"
"Wal, wouldn't that git you?" she exclaimed when John Herbert had shown her about hanging the receiver on the hook. "I sure wouldn't never 'a' believed hit if I hadn't done hit myself. You ought to try hit once, Nance; hit's past all-git-out."
"But, mother, who is this man Belden and what does he want?"
"I'll find all that out when he gits up hiear whar I can take a look at him," returned Ann. "That's one thing this hiear telephone can't do—show you whar the body don't be talkin' looks like. Mostly you can go more on folks' looks than you can on their talk."
"You must be careful, mother, about receiving every Tom, Dick, or Harry that wants to interview you. There will be all sorts of people trying to impose upon you."
"Like's not he's one of these hiear detectives you hiear about, or mebbe a policeman, or a revenue," said Nance. "You ain't got no call to take sich chances, Ann. Tain't safe. You'd best listen to me an'—"
Ann silenced her with a look. "I ain't afeared to see anybody," the mountain woman said, coldly. "I've allus took care of myself. We-us no call to take sich chances, Ann. Tain't safe. You'd best listen to me an'—"
Mr. James Belden proved to be a well-fed, well-groomed gentleman with a generously rounded front and an unmistakable air of prosperity. Judging from his white hair, he was well past middle-age. His countenance was kindly. His blue eyes, if somewhat questioning, were frank and honest. His manner was business-like but seemed to express as well a spirit of friendly interest, together with a quite justifiable curiosity.
"My business with you, Mrs. Haskel—"
"Never mind tellin' me your business, mister, till I know somethin' about you. You say as how your name's Belden, but that ain't a-meanin' nothin' to me. Might's well be Smith or Jones. How'd you know we-us hiear? We-us didn't tell nobody we war comin'!"
Mr. Belden's eyes twinkled his approval. "Fair enough, madam, fair enough. I may say, Mrs. Haskel, that it is our practice to—ah—note occasionally the arrival in the city of important personages; people, you understand, who might prove to be desirable clients. The hotel register, of course, informed me that you were here."
"I ain't never been no important personage yit, mister," returned Ann, dryly. "But I'm sure aimin' to be, so I reckon hit's all right. Be you a lawyer?"
Mr. Belden, surprised, admitted that he was.
"Uh-huh, you sure look like hit. Some lawyers air all right an' some ain't. Know a lawyer named Levering, do you?"
"Levering?... Levering? I do not at the moment recall the name, Mrs. Haskel. Does he practice in this city?"
"Mebbe he does an' mebbe he don't. He lives in Holmesburg, Pennsylvania, when he's to home." "No, I'm quite sure I have never had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Levering."
"Wal, he's a fine man. He's my lawyer. Knows his business, too. He'd jest natchally skin anybody alive what tried to sharp-trick me. That's what I pay him fer, Mebbe you know Judge Shannon?"
Mr. Belden's kindly face beamed. "Judge Shannon! Do you mean the Detroit Judge Shannon? We have been friends for many years. I met him first in that famous railroad case, Pollock versus the D. K. and O. He was for the defense. I was on the other side. We became friends and the friendship has endured. Great man, Shannon. Great lawyer. High principles—very high. Well, well, well! So you are friends of my old friend Shannon? Why, of course, of course! I remember now. The last time I saw the Judge he spoke of a young chap—a sort of ward of his—John Herbert—John Herbert. That's it—John Herbert Haskel. Well, well! We were joking each other about being bachelors, and he said he had the best of me because he had a boy. Said he raised him from a baby, almost. Boy was at school in Ann Arbor at the time."
The lawyer fixed his questioning eyes on Ann Haskel's son, and the young man, deeply moved, answered:
"Judge Shannon has been almost more than a father to me, sir—since my own father's death."
"Well, well, well! To think of finding friends of Judge Shannon's like this!" He laughed as if at some joke which he did not offer to share. "One never can tell; friends pop up in the most unexpected places. Haven't you found it so, madam?" His blue eyes twinkled with merriment and he seemed to be fairly hugging himself with enjoyment the cause of which he continued to keep to himself, and which did not appear to be at all justified by his discovery that these people were friends of Judge Shannon's.
John Herbert said, with a smile: "So it was Judge Shannon who asked you to call on mother, Mr. Belden. I wrote the judge about the change in our circumstances and told him we were coming here. It was like him to—"
"No, no," cried the lawyer. "You are all wrong. I give you my word I have had no communication of any sort from Shannon for several months. No, Mr. Haskel, I came to see your mother wholly on a matter of business—a matter which, I may say, is of considerable importance to me professionally."
"Ary man what's a friend of Judge Shannon air bound to be all right," said the mountain woman, gruffly. "Now, what business you got with me, Mr. Belden?"
"My business, Mrs. Haskel," Belden returned, still smiling, "is, briefly, this: I have a house—I should say an estate—which I desire to lease to some one who would appreciate living in a real home rather than in a hotel or an apartment. The place was owned by one of my clients who died. He named me as the executor of his will. No member of the family is living now in this part of the country, and, frankly, the property is somewhat of a problem as well as an expense. I ventured to call, thinking that perhaps you might be interested."
Ann Haskel shot a triumphant glance at Nance.

PATTERN 9115
This is a housefrock which the matron may wear, but there is nothing matronly about it—that is in the old meaning of the word. It is neat and slim and charming. You can make as many as three or four dresses of this design and like them all, especially if you choose different kinds of material, plain and patterned ones in cotton, wool or silk, making the frill to contrast now and then.
Pattern 9115 may be ordered only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 4 1/2 yard contrasting.

Itching Skin Due to Lack Of Oils

Symptom Is Known as "Pruritus" and Is Common in Winter

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

A READER WISHES to be told about "pruritus." He wants to know its cause and the remedy. This is a good deal of a contract, but I will do the best I can to supply the information.

Dr. Copeland

Pruritus is not an unusual ailment of old age. It may appear at any time of life. Itching of the skin, itching of one of the orifices of the body—severe itching of any part of the anatomy. This is pruritus. A common example is the midwinter itching from which so many persons suffer. It is worse when they remove the clothing to retire. In these cases it is likely to be confined to the lower limbs.

The Causes

Pruritus is not something that can be seen. It is merely a sensation, but a dreadful sensation of itching. It drives the victim to scratching. No matter how much he tries to control himself, he just can't resist the impulse. The skin may be torn and mutilated by the finger nails.

Worried, overworked, mentally depressed and overfed persons may have pruritus. In pregnant women it is not an uncommon symptom. Chronic dyspepsia, abuse of tea or coffee, and the use of certain drugs may produce it. Shellfish, strawberries, certain spices and flavorings, and other foods, may excite the itching.

The use of too strong soap may dissolve out of the skin the protective oils and leave it sensitive. It isn't a bad idea in pruritus to avoid soap entirely. Use oatmeal or bran water instead. Such a preparation will preserve the skin oils.

Liver trouble, diabetes, constipation, and indigestion are factors. Infected teeth, old sores of roots, infected tonsils and other pus conditions are responsible for some cases.

A Good Local Remedy

Simple food, plenty of water to drink, lemonade, buttermilk, gelatine puddings and an occasional yeast cake will help. It is wise to be careful of the diet and to watch the elimination. Sleeping in a cool room, without an excess of bed covering, will help a lot.

The best local remedy I know for pruritus is hyposulphite of soda. A tablespoon to a half glass of water, dabbed or mopped on the itching parts will do wonders in a suitable case.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

Cause and Effect By IRVIN S. COBB

IN A certain company of the 77th Division, which largely was made up of draft troops from New York City, was an East Side boy of Irish antecedents with a pretty wit of his own. In front of Chateau Thierry a machine-gun bullet passed through one of his knee joints. When he was able to get about on crutches, a surgeon at the base hospital said to him one day:

"Hogan, how far can you walk on that leg now?"
"Well, sir," said Hogan, "I'm doin' pretty well. I can hobble up to the end of the ward and read the prescriptions on the medicine bottles and figure out the causes. Then I hobbles to the cemetery out here and read the epitaphs and look at the effects."

MORE ABOUT BOND ISSUE

ASHVILLE, Sept. 7.—Bond issues are rather risky in normal times; but should be scrutinized very closely in depressions. Now regarding Asheville's water works project, we have endeavored at all times to give actual facts concerning the proposed improvement, yet we find some of those favorably inclined do not understand what is holding up work.

Our federal projects were launched more than a year ago and it was necessary at that time to furnish an itemized estimate of the probable cost of the improvement. This was prepared very carefully by our consulting engineers, Burgess & Niple of Columbus, one of the best firms in the country. They had hoped the estimates on necessary materials were ample, but the unexpected increases along some lines boosted the lowest bid above the estimate.

Plans were received under government supervision, and once accepted could not be changed as would have been possible had the work been private. We were left with two alternatives: apply for more funds or re-advertise and delay the project for several months, with a possible chance that the figures would not be reduced. We accepted the former and requested the administrator of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works to grant us $6,000 additional our rightful balance of the government's gift.

Now get this right. This project was estimated to cost $69,000, but under the competitive bidding the total cost is above $65,000. We have been guaranteed a government grant of 30 per cent of the proposed cost which would give us $18,000, but in the set up we have only been apportioned a grant of $12,000 with the bond issue of $48,000. We trust we have made ourselves clear when we state we are only asking for what rightfully belongs to us and our request will not add one penny additional to the bond issue. It is not a question of dollars and cents;

tut a different plan in appropriating the funds to cover installation costs. And we have it upon authority of an attorney in charge of P. W. A. projects in Ohio that the federal government has never yet failed to grant a request such as we have submitted and the inference is we will be provided with the necessary funds soon to permit us to close up the contract and begin the work.

—Citizen.

"I AINT AFRAID TO DIE," SAYS WOMAN KILLER

"Little Eva" Coo To Keep Secret

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN
COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 7.—"Little Eva" Coo, who murdered and must die, broke the iron shell of her nerve today and became a quiet mad woman seeing death wherever she looked.

"I'll burn," she said. "But I ain't afraid to die."

She looked like something that was frozen. She cried. She shook. She was scared.

Her strange blue eyes had turned from cold to wild in that second when a jury foreman spoke the words "guilty as charged" and "Little Eva" knew she must die for killing old Harry Wright, her crippled handyman, on Crumhorn mountain.

companioning her on the ride to Sing Sing tomorrow, Eva said quickly:

"Are you comin' down to see me burn?"

"No," the reporter replied, "there's a law against women witnessing electrocutions."

Eva grinned.

"But there's no law against burnin' women, huh?"

Her lawyers have announced their intention to appeal the case, but to "Little Eva," who does not understand law, the gesture is so many wasted words.

"Little Eva" understands only one thing—she is going to die.

BISHOP CITES SOCIAL ORDERS

Warns of Communistic Trend In Address to Rotary Club, Thursday.

Interesting information about Communism, Fascism and Nazism was given by Bishop A. R. Clippinger, of Dayton, of the United Brethren church, spoke before the Rotary club at its meeting Thursday noon.

Stating that each of these may be classed as social as well as religious terms there is a difference in their principles. "Communism is one of the forms of socialism," he said, "and it is the communists desire to abolish private ownership and substitute collective ownership."

"Fascism is nationalistic in its principles," he continued, "and Nazism is another form of Fascism. In Italy we have the black shirts while in Germany it is the brown shirts."

The speaker said Fascism has its Dictator and the state is supreme, and revolution is bound to take place, even though it be a bloodless one when such radical changes take place in the social life of a country.

Each of these movements is gaining strength and communism is gaining power in its attempt to abolish capitalism. Continuing Mr. Clippinger said he believed the most dangerous individuals in American life are the communists. These people do not have Christian ideals and believe the Christian church is nothing more than an opiate.

He blamed many of the recent strikes on communists who travel from one state to another to "sow the seeds of discontent among the workers."

"Our country is too close to these social changes and the United States has been placed in a 'Maze of Mirrors' trying to find a way out," he stated.

"What we Americans need is a fighting spirit to defend the principles and religious liberty in which this country was founded," he said in conclusion.

S. G. Rader, president of the club, was presented with a silver dish in appreciation of the entertainment furnished at last week's meeting at his Pike-co camp.

Simplest Cookery Terms Often Misused, Says Mrs. Geo. O. Thurn

Dear Friends in Circleville: While my lectures and articles are usually planned for both the new housekeeper and the woman of many years of homemaking experience, I find that cookery terms differ in interpretation in different parts of the country, and in many instances some standard phrase in common use with home economic specialists is completely misunderstood by the non-professional housekeeper.

Not long ago I glanced through a new cook book in which many such terms were misused, and one outstanding error was the misuse of the term "au gratin." Au gratin is not the brown crust on a cooked dish, but is a method of finishing a dish by cooking it in a cream sauce in the oven, topping the dish with crumbs or cheese or both.

But to begin with the very ABC's of cookery, "to bake" means using dry heat to cook food, usually in an oven, but it may also refer to cooking on coals or heated stones; it may be quick or slow. Also waffles and pancakes are "baked," not fried.

"Bring to boiling" means heat the saucepan of food until the surface is covered with bubbles—not just bubbles around the edge. "To braise" means to cook in a covered dish in the oven or on top of the stove with a small amount of liquid, a combination of roasting and stewing, slow, but making for great tenderness and good flavor.

But while "fricassee" is much like braising, there is this difference, the liquid for a fricassee is always stock, sauce or gravy, never just water, as the braising may be. It is also a slow process and is usually applied to chicken and fowl.

Frying is Deep or Shallow Usually a recipe will state what type of frying is to be used, that is whether a frying pan with a few tablespoons of fat are called for, or the deep fat kettle and a pound or two of fat is needed. But in either case the term "fry" is correct for it means to cook by immersion in hot fat. But "pan-broiling" means simply to cook in a sizzling hot pan without adding fat, as in cooking lamb chops, ham, pork chops, bacon and other fat-trimmed meats.

To "scallop" a dish means that a mixture of meat or vegetables or chicken and cream sauce, with a covering of crumbs, is set in a hot oven complete or finish the cooking, a term seldom applied to uncooked mixtures; the ramekin, shell or casserole, the scallop shell and other small dishes are used in scalloping. If the sauce and crumbs are used it is correct to say that the dish is au gratin also; a choice of terms depending on whether you want to give a French tang to your menu.

When something is to be "simmered," it is cooked in water which is kept hot, but just below the boiling point; tiny bubbles rise continually to the surface. But "steaming" is a broader term and may apply to cooking food in a steamer, that is in a perforated utensil set in another partially filled with boiling water; or by pressure in a pressure cooker; or in a double boiler where the steam rising from the boiling water in the lower container provides the cooking heat for the food in the upper kettle.

Brown bread and puddings are usually steamed in a mold or can set in a kettle of boiling water; or in a steamer above boiling water.

Little Robby, General Johnson's Secretary, Mystery of Washington

WASHINGTON—Nobody quite knows where Little Robby came from. General Johnson himself, says he doesn't know.

"When I came to Washington I found her in my office," he says, "and she has been with me two years to the rear, ever since."

Some say she was born in Evansville, Ill., a little town of about 500, where the Mississippi makes a big bend just below St. Louis—but nobody is quite sure. She was brought up in a convent and educated in a university, whose name, she says, she doesn't want to reveal for fear of bringing it notoriety.

Other stenographers and her women friends in the NRA know little about her. The Personnel Officer has no file regarding her past experience. It is known that she worked in the New York office of the Radio Corporation of America, then joined Democratic National Headquarters. Finally Bob Strauss, son of Macey's Ambassador to France, brought her to Washington. Installed in General Johnson's office when they were still writing the NRA act.

Mystery Woman

She remains the mystery woman of the Capitol. But no matter where she came from, there are few women who have worked harder for Roosevelt Recovery, wielded more power within the NRA, and have flashed more spectacularly across the headlines than Miss Frances Robinson.

She has sat in conferences with the barons of big business. She has been a frequent visitor at the White House. She is called "Robby" by the President of the United States. She has travelled 40,000 miles in Army planes. And she draws $6,000 annually for being secretary and shadow to the man who for more than a year has attempted to rule American industry.

There are many women secretaries in Washington who play a powerful role. But most of them work behind the scenes. They are quiet, efficient, loyal. They contribute materially to the success of the official whom they serve—but to the general public they are unknown.

Limelight

Little Robby has all of these qualities save one. She chose not to remain unknown.

Unquestionably, this was the harder role, for it has opened her to attack. No woman, no matter who she is, can play so important a part in the machinery of the most dynamic agency of Recovery and play it publicly—without arousing the interest of a nation. And this part Little Robby has accepted as hers.

She has, beyond any doubt, the nerve of a brass monkey. She is equally at home in straightening the tie of a newspaperman, bawling out office boys, attending a stag party uninvited, or talking to the President of the United States. One day Roosevelt telephoned to Johnson from Hyde Park. The General was out of the office, was not expected back for some time. Through some error, the President remained on the phone, waiting. Little Robby picked up the receiver.

"Hello, Mr. President," she said, in her shrill voice. "How are you?"

"It's awful hot down here," she continued.

"Yes, we're working terribly hard," ... And she kept this up for some time.

Few Friends

Probably it is natural that Robby should not be popular with other women in the Administration. NRA secretaries play up to her because she is powerful in personnel matters. But she has few close friends. Miss Perkins resents her constant presence during conferences with Johnson while Mrs. Roosevelt is slightly aloof—though Robby is invited to all of the White House "hen" parties.

Her closest champion is Mrs. (Continued on Page Five).

LONG'S FORCE MARCHING ON NEW ORLEANS

Entire Militia of Louisiana to Control Walmsley's Town

NEAR MARTIAL LAW

1,300 Armed Police May Stop Advance

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 7.—The mailed fist of the United States Senator Huey P. Long, Louisiana's dictator by act of a legislature bent to his will, crashed down on the city of New Orleans today.

An army of 2,200 men, the state's entire militia force, mobilized through the night in seventeen cities and towns in Louisiana under secret orders from Adj. Gen. Raymond Fleming and began a hurried march on this city.

During the night and into the day trucks, filled with khaki-clad steel-helmeted troops, rumbled over roads leading toward New Orleans. Troop trains clattered along a dozen railroad routes.

Shortly after dawn today, while the city's population slept unaware, the military invasion of New Orleans began.

TROOPS WELL-ARMED

The troops, equipped for full wartime operations, included infantry, cavalry and howitzer units and a medical detachment. The object of the state-wide troop movement was shrouded in official secrecy. Gov. Oscar K. "Okay Huey" Allen, fresh from a star chamber "citizens" meeting attended by some 50 persons whom he summoned to confer on alleged vice conditions in New Orleans, refused to discuss the matter. Gen. Fleming was tight-lipped. (Continued on Page Two)

Airport Saves Plane's Riders

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 7.—Chance sighting of an airport marker today saved the lives of five persons in a Chicago-bound plane, lost for six hours in fog and rainstorm and forced many miles off its course after leaving Newark, N. J., airport at 12:45 a. m.

The plane landed safely at Lowell airport. W. S. Shannon of New York, pilot of the plane, an American air line craft, said that shortly after taking off the plane ran into a driving rainstorm and the ship's radio went out.

"Then, with the ship at only 300 feet elevation," said Shannon, "I spotted a chimney with the words 'Lowell airport,' and an arrow. In a minute I saw the port beacons. It was hard to land but we made it."

LABATT ABDUCTORS THREATEN DEATH

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 7.—In open defiance of the mobilized strength of Canadian law enforcement services, John Labatt's abductors have struck again.

Over the signature of "Three Fingered Abe," who signed the original ransom demand, they have sent a second and third letter to Labatt at London. They charge that he has broken his "solemn promise and made over a meal" to pay $25,000 after his release, demand fulfillment of the pledge, and in their third message threaten that if he fails he will "get a belly full of lead."

GOOSE DOWNS PLANE

MINEOLA, N. Y., Sept. 7.—Forced down by a collision with a goose was the story told today by the crew of the Nassau-co police plane.

Enroute to Providence, R. I., to bring back a witness, the plane returned in three hours without the witness.

The pilot said the plane had struck a goose in flight, and had killed the bird. The plane was jolted but undamaged.

Ralph Ward and Fred Dauenhauer have been appointed the committee to arrange for the derby. More announcements of definite plans will be made from time to time.

City Thanked By Buffalo's Chief

Letter to Mayor Cady From Commissioner Higgins Congratulates Officers for Assistance and Co-operation In Arrests.

In a letter received by Mayor W. B. Cady today, James W. Higgins, commissioner of police for the city of Buffalo, N. Y., commends Circleville city police and administrative authorities for the efficient manner in which they apprehended three Buffalo murder suspects here last week-end.

The letter follows:

"My dear Mr. Mayor: "When our Detective-Sergeants Eugene M. Downey, John Masters, Richard H. Mack and William T. Fitzgibbons, and Policewoman Sarah Connors, returned to Buffalo with Bruno Sulek, Stanley Pluzdrak and Alice Zimmerman, wanted in connection with the murder of Police Lieutenant George L. Uhl, the kidnapping of Theodore Keating and several hold-ups, they told me of the wonderful cooperation and assistance that they received at your hands. I want you to know that the work and assistance of yourself and the members of your police department is very much appreciated by me. Our men received cooperation plus.

"The action taken by your police officers in so quickly establishing the identity of the man and woman in the accident, and the apprehension of the second man, is very commendable and I wish you would express to them my personal thanks, as well as the thanks of every member of this police department for their work in apprehending this gang that murdered a brother police officer.

"I presume that some time in your travels your feet may turn this way, and if you ever come to Buffalo you will be received with wide open arms and extended all possible courtesy and consideration, which, in part, may help to repay for the wonderful cooperation and assistance rendered.

"With kindest personal regards, and assuring you our fullest cooperation in all matters of mutual interest, I am,

Respectfully, JAMES W. HIGGINS, Commissioner of Police."

TRAFFIC VIOLATORS HIT

Drive against careless autoists and other violators of highway laws continued here today, with at least one heavy fine dishd out by Mayor W. B. Cady Friday morning.

Thursday by Deputy Sheriff Miller Fissell and Police Officer Raymond Smith on a charge of driving while intoxicated, was fined $100 and costs and his rights to drive were suspended for six months. He made arrangements to pay and was released.

Officers charged that Imler was driving on the left side of S. Court-st. finally "crashing" a red light at Main and Court-sts. The other violator, Lloyd Phillips, of Fredericktown, O., was fined $10 and costs for passing through the wrong side of a viaduct on Route 23, north of the city Thursday afternoon. He was arrested by Deputy Fissell.

DOG GIVES BIRTH TO SEVENTEEN PUPS

SUDBURY, Ont., Sept. 7.—This section of northern Ontario which presented a surprised world with the Dionne quintuplets had a new claim to fame today.

At a road camp near here, about 75 miles from the home of the quintuplets, Jessie, a half collie and St. Bernard dog, gave birth to a litter of seventeen pups which veterinarians claim is a world's record.

Frank, Racicot, the dog's owner, thought 17 pups were too many to have around, so 11 were drowned.

OHIO LEGION ASKS BONUS

It Would Put $482,929 in Pockets of Pickaway-Co Veterans.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 7.—Ohio's army of war veterans, banded together under the American Legion, today prepared plans to carry the fight for immediate cash payment of the bonus to the floor of the national convention of the organization in Miami next month with the battle cry—Aid prosperity by giving soldiers their $2,200,000 bonus.

Immediate payment of the bonus, according to the officers of the Ohio American Legion here, would release $117,878,406 purchasing power in Ohio. The state department of the legion unanimously went on record as favoring immediate cash payment at its convention in Sandusky.

"It therefore committed itself," said a legion official here, "to carry the fight to the national convention."

According to figures at the legion's headquarters here, immediate cash payment of the bonus would give ex-soldiers in Pickaway-co $482,929.

EDITOR SLAIN, CLUES SOUGHT

Militant Minneapolis Publisher, Foe of Underworld, Shot Down.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 7.—Only a meager description of the two assassins guided police today in their hunt for the killers of Howard Guilford, 40, crusading editor and foe of the underworld who was slain last night by a shotgun blast.

Guilford, former editor of the militant weekly publications, The Saturday Press and The Frank Sheet, was driving home when an automobile bearing the two killers crowded his car to the curb in the exclusive Pillsbury avenue district.

One of the gangsters fired a shotgun blast which nearly decapitated Guilford. The editor's automobile rolled up on the sidewalk with its dead driver. The killers paused a moment to make sure Guilford was dead and then raced away.

CLUES MEAGER

The death car bore yellow license plates, police learned from Everett Swanson, 22, the only witness to the murder. Swanson could give only a hazy description of the two killers.

Guilford's stormy journalistic career nearly came to an end in 1927 when he was shot in the abdomen by gunmen. Although wounded seriously he recovered.

While he was editor of The Saturday Press that publication was suppressed by the Hennepin county grand jury under the Minnesota newspaper "gag" law. The fight was carried to the United States supreme court where the law finally was held unconstitutional.

Gambling and other forms of vice were frequently the targets of Guilford's editorial attacks and he complained that his life had been threatened.

In 1927 shortly after he began publication The Saturday Press was ambushed in his automobile by gunmen and shot four times in the abdomen. While he was recovering in the hospital

NEW ENGLAND 'WAR' FEARED

Pickets Marching Toward Plants Preparing To Close All of Them.

By International News Service.

Lines in the nation's industrial civil war which thus far has taken 10 lives and sent scores to hospitals, tightened today as textile strike leaders declare they would not submit issues of the strike to arbitration until every mill in the country is closed.

Interpreted variously as the calm before the storm and the death knell of the strike, quiet settled over the south, while fear of violence shifted to New England where a huge picket army was reported moving forward in its drive to close all mills.

The main bodies of flying squadrons of pickets were reported moving in the Fall River and New Bedford areas of Massachusetts in long lines of motor cars. Others were seen near Lowell, Mass., and Manchester, N. H.

Both sides were prepared for violence. Some towns were described as armed camps. One hundred imported guards from New York manned perimeters thrown up in streets leading to mills in Dighton, Mass.

While Salem authorities, saying local workers had been threatened with bombing in their homes, authorized police to "use violence with violence." Henry A. Riviere, United Textile Workers' (Continued on Page Two)

Trainers May Play Academy Outfit

Where a week ago Circleville school was without an opponent to open its season on Sept. 21, it is believed Bill Hunt's Academy outfit will be the final selection although Holy Family is not yet out of the running. No matter which team is selected the game will be played here.

Officials already contracted are Jim Wirt, Ohio conference official and an instructor at Ohio State University, and Carleton Smith, Bexley, his mentor. Other officials expected to work here this year are Rodney Ross, Vic Kolb and

Ed. Boyd, the latter of Lancaster. Ross is the Columbus South coach while Kolb is an Ohio Wesleyan alumnus.

SQUAD LIGHT ONE

Coach Herberholz will have to teach his youths speed and deception this year since there is only one man on the squad, it is believed. That is big George Roth, out for his first year, and expected to give someone a race for a berth. Roth is big, not slow, and if the proper fighting spirit can be shot into him he will surely prove an asset. If Roth comes through as expected one tackle position will be well taken care of.

The other boys, there are about 24 more, are showing a fine spirit in Coach Herberholz' twice-a-day practice plan and seem determined to do something this year.

Columbus Academy has gained considerable attention in Columbus athletic circles under Bill Hunt, erstwhile Ohio State cage star. Heretofore the Academy has been a little bit questionable concerning eligibility rules but Hunt has promised Gephart that all boys on his squad this year would be eligible for any high school team. Holy Family, too, has a good squad but from a drawing card angle the Academy would be the best for the local school.

A week later Lancaster is met there in a night game.

TRAVELER "9" TO MEET WASHINGTON

The Travelers have beaten Washington twice this year although the defeated team made good showings each time.

The Travelers will end their season Sunday, Sept. 16, meeting Chillicothe here.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

FIVE YEARS AGO THERE were four high school football teams in Pickaway-co, Circleville, Ashville, Williamsport and Walnut. Now there is but one, Circleville. Williamsport was the first to quit, then came Walnut, then Ashville was third quitting after last season to devote its time and money to speed ball. This is the initial year for speed ball in the up-county town but already reports are that it's a success.

That Ashville-Circle football rivalry is definitely at an end but Ashville's basketball team beat our last year, and that's something. Another thing: This is for Al Kauter, Ashville coach. "You can send Jim Scoles and Chuck Young down here. We'd find places for them on our football team, and basketball, too, for that matter."

Frank Lynch did it again Thursday evening. His Colas Colas won from the rejuvenated Ohio Utilities team either 5 to 3 or 5 to 4, no one seemed sure.

Barney Ross and Jim McLarnin will try again tonight if the weatherman is more favorable than he was last night when the welterweight title bout was postponed 24 hours.

GEHRIG GAINS MONOPOLY ON RACE HONORS

Leads American Loop in Many Departments; Others Still Have Chance.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—With the Giants and Tigers slowly but surely getting together like a little colored boy and a piece of watermelon, what little interest remains in the major league races is centered in the battle for individual records and personal leadership.

Lou Gehrig of the Yankees is ambitious to top the American league in everything and he's a sure bet to attain most of his marks.

HOLDS MANY MARKS

When the season is over he will have played in more than 1,500 games for an all-time endurance record. At the moment he tops Charley Gehring of the Tigers and Heinie Manush in a hot race for batting honors. His 42 homers put him two up on Jimmy Fox of the Athletics. He has made the most hits in his own league and leads both circuits in runs batted in. He is third to Gehring of the Tigers and Werber of the Red Sox in runs scored. He also has hit most extra bases.

Aside from this, Lou has been of hardly any offensive value to the Yanks.

In the older circuit, Bill Terry is trying to overhaul Paul Waner of the Pirates for batting honors while Mel Ott of the Giants, Jimmy Collins of the Cards and Wally Berger of the Braves are having a hot tussle for home run honors with the first two having socked 32 and Berger 31.

Ott also has his eye fixed on the leadership for runs batted in and runs scored, in both of which departments he is now leading.

Ott did nothing to help his team yesterday but, as usual, the Giants had somebody else to supply the punch needed to take the Cubs 2-1 in 12 heats. The victory put the Giants nine games upon the Cubs and virtually killed what slender chance the Chicagoans might have had of catching the New York entry.

TERRY'S HIT WINS

The game developed into a corking dual between Lee and Parmelee. Galan's homer in the first was the only run made off Parmelee and the first of five hits the Giant's speed king yielded. Successive hits by Moore, Critz and Manager Billy Terry himself after two were out in the ninth put the crusher on Lee and the Cubs.

an armed assailant made an unsuccessful attempt to enter his room.

Since his recent retirement from active editorial work Guilford made several radio speeches in which he attacked communism and the attitude of Gov. Floyd B. Olson during the stormy truck drivers' strike.

According to recent reports Guilford was planning on founding a newspaper to oppose the Farmer-Labor party and Olson, the Farmer-Labor governor. Guilford also was said to be planning to announce his candidacy for mayor on a platform to "break the chain stores."

PROCLAMATION OF SAFETY CAMPAIGN

The high autocide toll of approximately two thousand persons annually in Ohio brings out vividly the pressing necessity of keeping the public's mind alive to the importance of safety.

Despite all efforts to eliminate hazards, to provide traffic control measures and to enforce regulations, there must also be fostered in the citizenry, young and old alike, an attitude of carefulness and attention to their own protection against the chances of an accident.

Therefore, deeply concerned over the staggering toll of deaths, injuries and property damage caused by highway accidents, I do hereby proclaim the month of September as "Street and Highway Safety Month" and urge the citizens of Ohio, officials in every community, all civic organizations and similar bodies to cooperate to the fullest in the nation-wide safety movement this month by practicing or sponsoring the safety requirements dictated by ordinary intelligence and prudence.

Traffic mishaps being the greatest cause of loss of life in accidents, I do particularly urge motorists to scrupulously refrain from any careless acts and by safe and careful driving to promote the precepts of safety at all times by their own example and habits.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the great seal of the State of Ohio to be affixed hereto at Columbus, this 25th day of August in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and thirty-four.

In a room adjoining the furnace are two motors of two-horsepower each which regulate the air in all of the rooms. This machine changes the air every two minutes. Powers' thermostats are also a part of the furnace and have been placed in each room.

The rooms formerly occupied by the two old furnaces will be converted into playrooms, one for the boys and one for the girls. They will be used during inclement weather.

Improvements at Walnut-st were started as a CWA project but were finally finished with funds furnished by the board of education. Barnes and Marion was the contracting firm.

The man who deserves most of the credit for seeing that the job was done right is R. G. Colville, clerk of the board of education. With the exception of the several weeks he spent in his primary campaign, Colville worked day and night at the building and is still on the job to see that the last bit of work is properly completed.

Someone fittingly recommended that the name of the building be changed to "Colville Building." It would be a real sign of appreciation for Mr. Colville's efforts.

LONG'S FORCE

Commanding officers of the units said no explanation was given in the mobilization orders.

Senator Long, in a tirade against the city administration of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, voiced over the radio from the militia-guarded chamber hearing of the legislative committee conducting an investigation of alleged municipal corruption, yesterday, however, was believed to have given the cue.

BLAMES POLICE

Long, prosecutor-in-chief of the inquiry, charged the committee's witnesses had been intimidated by New Orleans police under the direction of Mayor Walmsley.

"There seems to be a conspiracy afoot to force the governor to put the police of this town under the militia," the Senator shouted.

"The governor promised this committee and its witnesses absolute complete protection. He gave us almost unlimited power to strip this city of all its civil power—I can have the governor call the legislature into session and put every rotten, crooked lowdown official in this city out of office."

No proclamation of martial law had been announced by Gov. Allen early today. This was not deemed necessary, however, as the city was placed under "partial martial law" when troops on July 30 seized the city registration office, where the rolls of eligible voters of Orleans parish are kept.

Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley told International News Service:

"We won't surrender the city to the militia without a struggle. We intend taking whatever steps may be necessary at the proper time."

Walmsley is backed up by a local force of 1,300 well-armed policemen.

The city recently purchased a supply of submachine guns and automatic rifles.

Five hundred of Walmsley's policemen were sworn in when the militia seized the registration office five weeks ago.

G. O. P. PLANS

reach an accord on planks affecting state government and continued in session until 4 a. m. today.

At that hour the platform committee appointed a sub-committee to whip the result of its night's labor into final shape, shear off unnecessary excrescences and obtain approval of the finished product from Clarence J. Brown, G. O. P. gubernatorial nominee.

CALLED FROM BED

The sub-committee, composed of P. L. Mitchell, Cincinnati; Walter Ruff, Canton; D. C. Brower, Dayton; Karl Timmermeister, Wapakoneta; Chester C. Bolton, Cleveland; and the state chairman, Ed Schorr, routed Nominee Brown out of bed before dawn to discuss the platform in order that it might be submitted to the closing session of the state convention.

Featuring the long night of platform deliberations was the attempt of Ruff, state senator from Canton, to write in a plank committing the party to collective bargaining in its labor policy.

Several members maintained that such recognition of collective bargaining would be nothing short of "falling in with the New Deal." Senator Ruff denied this and challenged the party to say to labor "you are either for or against."

Final decision on the wording of the proposed labor plank was to be conformed to the wishes of the gubernatorial nominee. There was a possibility that the entire labor plank might be eliminated before the convention for adoption, some committee members said.

No specific tax program was contained either in the tentative platform or in the keynote address of Brown. Adequate tax measures were favored but there was no mention of either a sales tax or an income tax.

The school plank in the platform as tentatively accepted by the resolutions committee went no farther than to put the party on record as guaranteeing an elementary and high school education to every child.

ELIMINATE DELAYS

When completed the party platform also will contain planks committing the Republicans to enact legislation necessary to eliminate long delays in utilities rate cases and one written by the Ohio sportsmen's league advocating control of the state conservation department by a bi-partisan commission.

State Sen. John A. Lloyd, Portsmouth, was elected chairman of the resolutions committee which framed the platform. Other committee members were:

P. L. Mitchell, Cincinnati; Henry F. Cordes, Cincinnati; D. C. Brower, Dayton; Karl Timmermeister, Wapakoneta; D. F. Frueh, Paulding; Arthur Hamilton, Lebanon; Henry Pfeiffer, Kenton; Nolan Boggs, Toledo; Homer Edwards, Tronton; Milton J. Columbus, Chillicothe; Paul Ginghens, Columbus; L. E. Erv, Ravenna; James A. "If we are shot at we will shoot back. If we stick together three days we will close every mill in the country."

It was estimated more than 355,000 were on strike in the nation. To this number Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the general strike committee, threatened to add 165,000 from industries allied with textiles.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Faced with a mounting toll of violence and casualties in the gigantic textile strike—already at 10 killed and scores wounded—a presidential board of mediators met here today to try to make peace.

The outlook was not immediately bright.

Obviously angered by the killings in the south, the strike leaders, directed by Francis J. Gorman, announced they would not be willing to talk mediation until every mill in the far-flung industry is shut down. They are still some distance from that goal.

The mill-owners, on the other hand, seemed equally cool to federal mediatory efforts. Prior to the actual walk-out, the employers consistently declined to meet the union leaders at the counsel table of the national labor relations board, and since the strike became effective they have indicated no change in this attitude.

He introduced Dr. W. R. Funk, now retired and a resident of the church home at Lebanon, who was publishing agent for 36 years. At the conclusion of the introduction Dr. Funk was so overcome with emotion that he was unable to speak. Later he expressed his appreciation.

Origin of Term "Toasting"

The Anglo-Saxon custom of drinking healths has been, since the Eighteenth century, termed "toasting." In the latter the word is connected with the toast put into ale cups. This is probably correct, says the author of an old English work on ale and beer, though Wedgewood considers "toast" a corruption of "stos an," knock (clashes), a German drinker's cry.

CLIPPINGER TRACES HISTORY OF REVIVAL

Dating the history of American revivals back to 1734 with the preaching of a series of sermons by Jonathan Edwards at Northampton, Conn., on "Justification by Faith," Bishop A. R. Clippinger, Dayton, of the United Brethren church, delivered his annual oration to the southeastern Ohio district of his church here Thursday.

Dr. Clippinger's subject was "The Evangelistic Zeal of the Fathers."

"We would consider that a pretty dry subject for revival sermons today," the speaker said. "Not many pastors would even attempt a series of sermons on that subject, but the whole community was stirred. It spread throughout all Connecticut and into New Jersey."

He then referred to the Great Awakening in the spring of 1740 when Whitfield returned to America and joined Edwards.

CITES DWIGHT'S EFFORT
"Following the Revolutionary war there was a period of demoralization both spiritually and financially," the Bishop continued. "It was still a question if the new government could subside and if Christianity would ever be on the ascendancy. Infidelity and agnosticism were common on every hand and especially in the colleges. When Dr. Timothy Dwight became president of Yale university he found a deplorable situation. Less than half dozen students were members of the college church. His chapel talks were deeply religious and in 1802 a revival broke out when 75 students out of 230 were converted. Dartmouth and Princeton shared similar experiences. In western Pennsylvania a revival broke out and more than 1,000 souls professed conversion."

"The revivals took on a special form," he went on, "They were often held in the woods. Great camp meetings were assembled; great excitement was seen. People would fall into trances, and lie apparently lifeless for hours. Some would get what was called the jerks."

Dr. Clippinger next called attention to Charles G. Finney whom he ranked among the greatest of earlier evangelists. He also listed the familiar name of the late Dwight L. Moody whose doctrine and preaching he compared to Jonathan Edwards.

RECALLS RECENT NAMES
Among more recent evangelists Dr. Clippinger listed B. Fay Mills, Sam Jones, Sam Small, William A. Sunday, Dr. R. A. Torrey and Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman.

In turning to the fathers of the United Brethren denomination, Dr. Clippinger said: "The spirit of evangelism has been so thoroughly imbedded into the hearts and minds of our pastors and preachers that most of them have been successful evangelists."

"For United Brethren folks there is no volume more interesting than Bishop Newcomer's Diary. This antiquated volume is filled with stories of conversions. Whenever these Church Fathers went they preached repentance. Wherever they went they called upon people to give their hearts to God. They met with bitter opposition but at the same time many hearts were receptive to the gospel preaching. Like in the days of Samuel—The word of God was scarce. They were men of Holy zeal, whose hearts were aflame with the truth and their hearts warm for the salvation of their neighbors."

Dr. Clippinger went on to say: "The United Brethren church is an outgrowth and result of an evangelistic zeal and passion on the part of its founders."

He closed by reciting from Psalms 126:6 saying: "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing bringing his sheaves with him."

REV. COX SPEAKS
The annual report of Rev. A. B. Cox, Newark, superintendent of the southeastern Ohio district, made the following recommendations: 1. That the superintendent call together the district superintendents soon after conference to outline the policy for the year; 2. That a revival be held in each church and a gospel team or workers be organized to help others; 3. That a revival be held to the children of the church; 4. That more time be given to pastoral work, and; 5. That charges carefully checked, and member canvass as per standard and execute all extraordinary work to pay budget in full.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

CHILDREN stories are, I think, just about the most natural stories there is. If they got anything in their minds it comes out. They don't hold back anything. Here is a new kid one for you that is a whizz. A little boy come home one day and said to his Mother that he had taken up Physiology at school.

"Well," said the Mother, "what did they learn you about the human body?"

"It's divided into three parts," her son replied. "First is the cranium, where the brains are, if any. Then the Thorax, in which are the lungs, the liver and the lights; and last the abdomen in which are the intestines, and the A, E, I, O, and sometimes W and Y."

for Christmas and brought Mrs. Johnson to Washington shortly after Robby joined the General's staff.

Robby has caused plenty of personal havoc inside the NRA and among other things helped to alienate Donald Richberg, NRA counsel.

On one occasion after Johnson had been away on an extended trip Richberg got him alone, locked the office door, and started outlining some extremely urgent problems.

At the height of the conversation came an insistent banging on the door, accompanied by Little Robby's voice. Johnson motioned for her to be let in.

"What do you mean by locking yourselves away from me this way?" she complained.

Richberg picked up his coat and walked out.

Finis

When the final story of General Johnson is written—and the NRA chapter is almost finished—Little Robby will occupy an important part. Her part of the story will be that of a small-town girl from the Middle West who stayed for a man and a cause she believed in.

She stayed sixteen hours a day. And with all her aggressiveness and mannerisms, she has done a difficult job. She has a great capacity for detail. She is a highly efficient secretary. And no matter how late the General roared with the steel workers or at what time of the night his hoarse voice would yell "Robby!"—she was always there.

And if Robby had one real fault it was not her shrill voice or her love of the limelight, but the fact that she "yessed" Johnson, at times egged him on.

When he was working up one of his hell-raising speeches, hers was the loudest applause. When he was berating "the professors who wear the heaviest of horn-rimmed glasses," or roaring at the steel workers, "I have worn enough skin off that part of me that fits into a saddle . . . to make a half-dozen critics such as they," Little Robby was delighted.

And since Johnson likes applause, the effect was to spur him on to greater invective.

But Robby has had a swell time. To use her own words:

"It's wonderful to meet all the great men of the country. I'm getting a great kick out of it. But after all this is just another job for me."

Northern New York state, New England and eastern Canada boast the largest yellow birch trees to be found in North America. In these areas it is not uncommon for members of the birch tree family to reach a height of 80 to 90 feet.

Raisins Make Such Delicious Baked Desserts

The year round we find the nutritious, delicious and useful raisin available. It is at its best in baked desserts such as pudding and cake, and one of the prime favorites for pie. Here are some of the selected recipes featuring this dried fruit:

Brown Raisin Cake

Two cups seeded raisins; one cup shortening; one cup brown sugar; three eggs, beaten; one cup milk; one cup molasses; four cups flour; three teaspoons baking powder; one half teaspoon salt; one half teaspoon ground cloves; one teaspoon ground ginger; one teaspoon grated nutmeg; one cup chopped nuts.

Blend shortening and sugar together, then add eggs, milk, molasses, flour sifted with salt, baking powder and spices. Add raisins which have been floured, and mix well. Turn into a large round cake pan which has been rubbed well with shortening and then floured. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for two hours and thirty minutes. Or bake as two small cakes, for about two hours. Cover with mocha frosting, or leave plain.

Raisin Pie

Two cups seedless raisins; two lemons; one orange; one and one half cups hot water; one cup granulated sugar; one cup walnut meats, chopped coarsely; two teaspoons cornstarch; pastry for two-crust pie.

Place the raisins in a bowl, add the grated rind and the strained juices of lemons and orange, hot water, nuts and sugar; mix and turn into an enameled saucepan and bring slowly to boiling point. Then thicken with the cornstarch mixed with a little cold water and let simmer for two or three minutes. Turn out and let cool.

Use as filling for two-crust pie; another version is to make enough pastry for three crusts; line the pie with one pour in half the filling; lay on the other crust (very thin one); add rest of filling; cover with top crust, brush over with milk or beaten egg. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 350 degrees, till crust is browned lightly. Be sure to make the extra rich pastry for the three-crust pie, using a flaky pastry or puff pastry recipe. This pie will make you famous.

French Raisin Cakes

Three quarters cup seedless raisins; one half cup shortening; one half cup sugar; two eggs, beaten; one cup flour; one teaspoon baking powder; one teaspoon vanilla extract; jam, apricot, raspberry, chopped nuts and coconut.

Blend the shortening and sugar smoothly, add eggs, beat again, add flour sifted with the baking powder, beat well, add vanilla, beat again. Add raisins and divide into twelve large cakes (which may be made in a 10x10x2 inch pan). Bake in a 350 degree oven. Cool brush over with a sprinkling of sugar and eat with nuts. Makes muffin cakes.

SIMPLEST COOKING

To "cut and fold" use regular downward motions with spoon or spoon, as if you were cutting the mixture, at the end of each turn the spatula or spoon and mix back; continue until the mixture is thoroughly blended.

When you "blanch" something you may either pour boiling water over it, drain and rinse in cold water, or drop the food into boiling water (as nuts, when the skins are to be removed). The former method is used for rice and macaroni; for tomatoes and peaches when skins must be loosened.

To "parboil" a dish, you cook it partially, one third of the time for usual cooking; then finish as directed.

To "marinate" is to let food lie in a sauce, brine or dressing in order to bring out flavor.

JUST KIDS

BRINGING UP FATHER

I AINT AFRAID TO DIE," SAYS WOMAN KILLER

"Little Eva" Coo To Keep Secret

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 7.

"Little Eva" Coo, who murdered and must die, broke the iron shell of her nerve today and became a quiet mad woman seeing death wherever she looked.

"I'll burn," she said. "But I ain't afraid to die."

She looked like something that was frozen. She cried. She shook. She was scared.

Her strange blue eyes had turned from cold to wild in that second when a jury foreman spoke the words "guilty as charged" and "Little Eva" knew she must die for killing old Harry Wright, her crippled handyman, on Crumhorn mountain.

WILL REMAIN SILENT

"But I'll die without tellin' what I know," she grinned—a fanatic's smile widening through a frightened woman's fear.

"There ain't one person in the world who knows how Harry Wright died. And they'll never find out from me."

Eva sat on a narrow wooden bench in her white barred cell in the little Otsego Jail. She will leave tomorrow for Sing Sing death house. The International News Service reporter sat on the other end of the bench.

Murderess, outcast, scarlet woman—all the epithets that had been hurled at her in the past three weeks were written on her stony face.

"Am I shieldin' somebody? I wouldn't say if I was. It doesn't matter now. I'm taking this rap, and I took it without cryin', didn't I?"

DONE FOR $9,802

Eva swore today she would carry to her grave the secret of that murder, done at the haunted house on Crumhorn mountain—for $9,802.

"I never had a chance," she said bitterly.

She refused to tell her mother's name or where she lived.

When a reporter suggested accompanying her on the ride to Sing Sing tomorrow, Eva said quickly:

"Are you comin' down to see me burn?"

"No," the reporter replied.

"There's a law against women witnessin' electrocutions."

Eva grinned.

"But there's no law against burnin' women, huh?"

Her lawyers have announced their intention to appeal the case, but to "Little Eva," who does not understand law, the gesture is so many wasted words.

"Little Eva" understands only one thing—she is going to die.

BISHOP CITES SOCIAL ORDERS

Warns of Communistic Trend In Address to Rotary Club, Thursday.

Interesting information about Communism, Fascism and Nazism was given by Bishop A. R. Clippinger, of Dayton, of the United Brethren church, spoke before the Rotary club at its meeting Thursday noon.

Stating that each of these may be classed as social as well as religious terms there is a difference in their principles. "Communism is one of the forms of socialism," he said, "and it is the communists desire to abolish private ownership and substitute collective ownership."

"Fascism is nationalistic in its principles," he continued, "and Nazism is another form of Fascism. In Italy we have the black shirts while in Germany it is the brown shirts."

The speaker said Fascism has its Dictator and the state is supreme, and revolution is bound to take place, even though it be a bloodless one when such radical changes take place in the social life of a country.

Each of these movements is gaining strength and communism is gaining power in its attempt to abolish capitalism. Continuing Mr. Clippinger said he believed the most dangerous individuals in American life are the communists. These people do not have Christian ideals and believe the Christian church is nothing more than an opiate.

He blamed many of the recent strikes on communists who travel from one state to another to "sow the seeds of discontent among the workers."

"Our country is too close to these social changes and the United States has been placed in a 'Maze of Mirrors' trying to find a way out," he stated.

"What we Americans need is a fighting spirit to defend the principles and religious liberty in which this country was founded," he said in conclusion.

S. C. Rader, president of the club, was presented with a silver dish in appreciation of the entertainment furnished at last week's meeting at his Pike-co camp.

Simplest Cookery Terms Often Misused, Says Mrs. Geo. O. Thurn

Dear Friends in Circleville:

While my lectures and articles are usually planned for both the new housekeeper and the woman of many years of homemaking experience, I find that cookery terms differ in interpretation in different parts of the country, and in many instances some standard phrase in common use with home economic specialists is completely misunderstood by the non-professional housekeeper.

Not long ago I glanced through a new cook book in which many such terms were misused, and one outstanding error was the misuse of the term "au gratin." Au gratin is not the brown crust on a cooked dish, but is a method of finishing a dish by cooking it in a cream sauce in the oven, topping the dish with crumbs or cheese or both.

But to begin with the very ABC's of cookery, "to bake" means using dry heat to cook food, usually in an oven, but it may also refer to cooking on coals or heated stones; it may be quick or slow. Also waffles and pancakes are "baked," not fried.

"Bring to boiling" means heat the saucepan of food until the surface is covered with bubbles—not just bubbles around the edge. "To braise" means to cook in a covered dish in the oven or on top of the stove with a small amount of liquid, a combination of roasting and stewing, slow, but making for great tenderness and good flavor.

But while "fricassée" is much like braising, there is this difference, the liquid for a fricassée is always stock, sauce or gravy, never just water, as the braising may be. It is also a slow process and is usually applied to chicken and fowl.

Frying is Deep or Shallow

Usually a recipe will state what type of frying is to be used, that is whether a frying pan with a few tablespoons of fat are called for, or the deep fat kettle and a pound or two of fat is needed. But in either case the term "fry" is correct for it means to cook by immersion in hot fat. But "pan-frying" means simply to cook in a sizzling hot pan without adding fat, as in cooking lamb chops, ham, pork chops, bacon and other fat-trimmed meats.

To "scallop" a dish means that a mixture of meat or vegetables or chicken and cream sauce, with a covering of crumbs, is set in a hot oven complete or finish the cooking, a term seldom applied to uncooked mixtures; the ramekin, shell or casserole, the scallop shell and other small dishes are used in scalloping. If the sauce and crumbs are used it is correct to say that the dish is au gratin also; a choice of terms depending on whether you want to give a French tang to your menu.

When something is to be "simmered," it is cooked in water which is kept hot, but just below the boiling point; tiny bubbles rise continually to the surface. But "steaming" is a broader term and may apply to cooking food in a steamer, that is in a perforated utensil set in another partially filled with boiling water; or by pressure in a pressure cooker; or in a double boiler where the steam rising from the boiling water in the lower container provides the cooking heat for the food in the upper kettle.

Brown bread and puddings are usually steamed in a mold or can set in a kettle of boiling water; or in a steamer above boiling water.

Fresh Fruit Muffins Are Popular Now

With fresh berries and fruits still in the market, the berry muffin for breakfast or any other meal, is demanded on many home menus; and fruit flavored breads are delicious as a table bread, "plain-so" with butter, or to be used for picnic luncheons and porch parties.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

One fourth cup shortening; one third cup sugar; one egg; four teaspoons baking powder; two-thirds teaspoon salt; one cup of milk; one cup blueberries; two and one half cup flour; mix in the order given first sifting the baking powder with the flour. Bake in muffin pans rubbed with shortening in a hot oven, 400 degrees, twenty to twenty-five minutes. Use other fruits in the same proportion.

ORANGE BREAD

One cup milk; one half compressed yeast cake; one teaspoon salt; two tablespoons shortening; three tablespoons sugar; one orange; one egg. Flour as directed below.

Scald the milk in the upper part of an enameled double boiler; add the yeast, salt, sugar, mix, and add one and one half cups flour, mix, let rise, then turn down all around. Now add the egg beaten with the grated orange skin, and the orange which has been put through the chopper; add enough flour to knead. Knead well, put into a pan rubbed with shortening, let rise at room temperature until almost double, then bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees, decreasing after fifteen minutes to 350 degrees, giving a total of forty-five minutes for the loaf.

Fruit Variations

For various types of fruit muffins, use the muffin recipe given above and in place of the blueberries use one cup raw apples, chopped very fine; or one cup of cooked, dried apricots, chopped fine; three fourths cup currants; one half cup dates cut fine; one cup cooked prunes cut fine; one cup whole, seeded raisins, which have been soaked in water until soft.

Corn Muffins

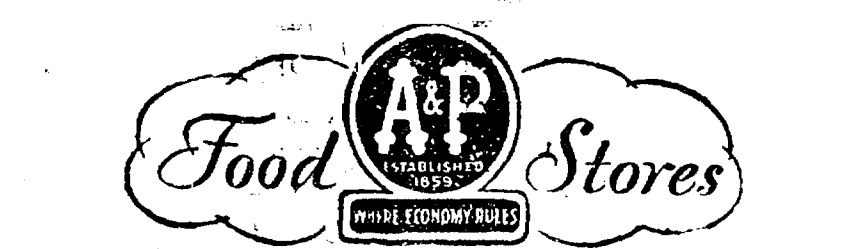

A delicious corn muffin is made with the same recipe using new corn, one cup scraped from the cob in place of fruit; or one and one half cups chopped nuts; one cup grated cheese; one or two ounces (squares) grated, melted chocolate.

The sweet, cheese, fruit and nut muffins are delightful for tea table sandwiches with marmalade, while fruit muffins are old favorites for breakfast and the corn muffin is an especially filling luncheon.
